HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 26TH, 1910.

THE lengthy telegram we publish to-day, relating to the protest of British manufacturers against the probibitory import tariff adopted by Japan, will be welcomed for the news it gives that negotiations are in progress for special arrangements whereby damage to British trade will be obviated or at least diminished. Sir EDWARD GREY is doubtless speaking of the Japanese Govern. ment when he says that every desire is shown to discuss these special arrangements, but we are glad to notice that this desire is likewise very widely manifested in the Japanese Press. Generally speaking, the public, as well as the Government, are showing the most friendly spirit and recognis ing the fact that the unfavourable treatment of British trade is bound to re-act on the political relations of the two countries. There is certainly no wish in Japan to see those relations weakened, and genuine surprise has been shown in the most unexpected quarters in Japan that the tariff should have evoked such a chorus of protest in England. We may notice, for example, a report in a recent newspaper of an interview with General Viscount Soga, who is a prominent member of the House of Peers, and was a member of the Tariff Revision Committee. The Viscount is re- of stealing brane brakets from private ricshas. ported as having stated that before the He was bund guilty and sentenced to nine Tariff was approved, the Government gave weeks imprisonment and six hours stocks.

that statement secured for the tariff the approval of the House of Peers. "Viscount Soga is, therefore," says the translated report, "rather surprised to hear that strong opposition has been aroused in Great Britain against the tariff," and his further remarks go to show that he is highly indignant with the Government for "having made a fool of the nation" and intends to "attack the Government for its blunder if its explanations on the matter are unsatisfactory." We expect to learn that the Viscount failed to clearly apprehend the nature of the assurance given by the Government, for it could hardly be expected of the Government that it should first seek the approval of the Foreign Powers for its tariff arrangements. Still, it was the obvious duty, of the Government to consider what effect the tariff would be likely to have on the country's international relations; and how the Government and the Tariff Revision Committee could have overlooked the fact that a tariff which hit the British trade especially concerning its bearing of with especial severity could fail to arouse in the import of textiles. Great Britain strong resentment, it is hard indeed to understand. If public feeling in tions with Japan were still proceeding, Japan is as favourably disposed as the Press the Tariff, in order to meet the British give information without prejudicing objections, this could best be accomplished by an amending Bill in the next session of the Diet. The Deputation which waited upon Sir EDWARD GREY suggested a special treaty, and a similar suggestion has been made in one of the Japanese papers. But a unilateral Treaty, we imagine, would only serve to land Japan in greater difficulty, and it would be more satisfactory on favoured-nation" treatment being both sides, we should think, if the insufficient. reductions were made by an amending case for a reduction of the on textiles has been made ou apart altoget er from any claims to special consideration which Great Britain reduction were made by the passage of an trade ought to receive the most careful $35.00 probably on the ene hand, be an arrangement ing to meet us, but it would be holding having acknowledged that they went to less open to objection by the other foreign Powers than a unilateral treaty would be; and, on the other hand, it would afford to the British people good and satisfactory evidence of the sincerity of those sentiments of friendship and alliance so widely professed in Japan.

THE HARBOUR FATALITY LAUNCH COXSWAIN CHARGED

WITH MANSLAUGHTER." The hearing of the charge of manslaughter preferred against Kwok Lo, coxswain of the Yaumati ferry launch Wah Hing, in connection with the recent collision which resulted in the death of Constable True and a Chinese seaman, was continued before Mr E. R. Hallifax at the Magistracy yesterday afternoon. Captain F. W. Lyons, Deputy Superintendent of Police, presecuted, and Mr. W. E. L. Shenton (of Messrs, Deacon, Looker & Dencon) represented the defendant.

Mr. A Ritchie was the next witness. He said he was a passenger on the forry launch. Wah Hing on the night of the 4th instant. About two and a half minutes after the launch had left the Central Market wharf he heard a loud crash. The launch immediately stopped and wont astern. Witness got up from his saat; looked over the port side, and saw a man struggling in the water. A lifebuoy was immedistely thrown overboard. He also saw a boat on the sturboard side of the launch. The ferry picked up two Chinese, and somebody on board asked in Chinese how many men were in the boat. The answer was five. At the time three-Chinese had been rescued. The defendant was steering the launch at the time.

Was there any lookoutkept?-I couldn't say, as there were 70 or 80 passengers on board' fore and aft.

At what rate of speed did the launch leave the wharf? - When she struck she was going about three-quarter speed.

night, blowing heavy, and a very strong current running westward. Do you think the steersman's view could be obstructed by the people in front of him?-I don't think there was any obstruction. One or two passengers in a wrong position might have obstructed his view? -- If they were standing up. Was there a light in the fore part of the launch for the convenience of passengers?-

Do you think such a light would obscure the view for the man who was steering ?-I can't Cross-examined by Mr. Shenton: How many years have you lived in Yaumati?

And you usually cross by the same ferry line? -Yes, twice or three times a day.

And have the launches always been managed in the same way? - Exactly. And you haven't been in a collision before?-

Was the launch going at the usual speed ?-

Do you think the speed was reckless ! - No. You saw no lights from the police boat ?-

Prior to the collision did you hear any warning from that boat?-No. After the collision did the launch cruise about looking for the two missing men? - She stood by for more than halfan hour. What did they do next?-I asked the coxswain to go slow and steam west in hopes of picking up the other two men.

How long were you cruising like that ?-Close on an hour.

Was everything done that could possibly be done?-Everything possible was done. It was a clear enough night to see the ordinary lights of launches passing by?-Yes.

In reply to his Worship witness said the coxswain was perfectly capable, and did not lose his head at the time of the collision. He blew four whistles and went right astern. There was no warning before the collision. Mr. A. Romero, another passenger on the It is understood that the engineer in charge | Wah Hing, said he heard a man in the launch shouting, "There is a sampan." Witness stood up and saw a police boat coming in towards the launch on the starboard side. Then he saw the collision, after which the police the water. One of them caught a rope from the launch and was pulled aboard. The launch then turned round and a lifebuoy was thrown to the other man in the water, who was eventually got aboard. The commain then blew his whistle four times and another launch came up. . A search was made for the remainder of the crew of the police boat, but they were not found. The launch, witness thought, was going at full speed when the collision occurred. The shout of "Sampan" was made by someone on the starboard side of the launch. Witness saw no

FRANCIS PIGGOTT).

AFTER MANY DAYS.

Re H. Yacobi. The Deputy Official Receiver (Mr. Fletcher) said he was making application for a recission of composition and to adjudge the man bankrupt. The receiving order was made early in 1905. The man was employed in the Colony as a solicitor's clerk, and it was arranged that he should pay $40 a month until his debts were paid. 'He had only paid two instalments, and then the matter was overlooked. He (Mr. Fletcher) held at present $140. The only large creditors were Messrs. Wilkinson & Grist, who agreed to the man being adjudicated bankrupt. The other creditors were Indian watchmen, who could not be found. He would now pay out the small sum he held in dividend. The application was granted.

PARTNER OR MANAGER. The adjourned hearing of the petition that the Hang Hing firm be adjudicated bankrupt was called on.

Mr. Slade, who was instructed by Mr F. X. d'Almada, said it was disputed that the man who had given the notice suspending payment was only manager and not a partner of the firm. The man in question was called and stated that although he had signed a certain promissory note on behalf of the firm he did so because he was asked to do so.

Considerable argument was adduced by Counsel, after which his Lordship reserved his: decision on the point.

OUT-OF JURISDICTION. Re Hu Nim Cha, the Deputy Official Receiver stated that this was on application to rescind the proceedings in bankruptcy. Mr. Goldring had asked that the matter stand over for a week-The debtor was now out of jurisdiction and there were no assets of any sort.

Adjourned. A WEALTHY FATHER.

The adjourned hearing of the petition that Lai Fau Sang be adjudicated bankrupt was proceeded with. Mr. Fletcher stated that the matter of this bankruptcy was adjourned from the last sitting ; of the Court in order to allow of inquiries being made as to the man's assets. He would now be

Mr. Grist said this was a creditor's petition. The debt was $744, and the act of bankruptcy was seizure and sale. The assets were set forth in the affidavit at $4,500, consisting of book directors much anxiety. debts, and the liabilities were $5,500.

Mr. Fletcher said this was one of the many unsatisfactory cases. He found that the shop had been closed and a new signboard put up. There was no proof that the book debts were of any value. It would be more satisfactory for the petitioning creditor to take legal proceedings for the recovery of his debt.

His Lordship said be did not think he had the power to order that.

Mr. Fletcher said that the petitioning creditor should bring some proof as to the existence of introduction of competing foreign-made goods. the book dehts.

ceedings be taken and that the fokis be allowed to have the balance. This was agreed to.

DECEASED'S ESTATE IN BANKEUPTCY. Re Eduardo Ros.

Mr. Jackson asked that the estate of the deceased be administered in bankruptcy.

Mr. Fletcher agreed and asked for two local Spanish gentlemen to assist him, the expense of engaging them to come out of the estate.

His Lordship consented.

THROUGH THE HEART OF ASIA.

LIEUTENANT ETHERTON'S EXPEDITION. To-an-intensely interested audience, at the Royal United Service Institution, on the 22nd inst., Lieutenant P. T. Etherton, of the 39th Garhwal Rifles, told the story of his remarkable trek scross Asia from India to Siberia. The journey of nearly 4,000 miles, undertaken from a love of sport and travel, occupied a whole year, and, while it yielded fine trophics of heads and horns, was not unattended with hardships and dangers. Starting in March, 1909, from Lausdowne, in the Himalayas, Lieutenaut Etherton, accompanied by a Garwhali orderly-

Further on in his journey Lieutenant Etherton made a halt at the city Yarkand, and the Chinese Governor gave a banquet in his honour. The monu included shark's fins, bamboo shoots, and bamboo roots, pigeon's eggs preserved in chalk, stag's tendons, lofus seeds, and sea slugs - the latter a delicacy possessed of as many legs as a centipede. China appeared desirous of consolidating her hold on Chinese Turkistan, and since the Russe-Japanese War was awakening to a sense of her responsibilities and the latent power she possessed, realising that to get at the root of the eril she must purify her system of administration, corrupt and rotten to the core. Lieutenant Etherton gave an interesting account of the strange tribes he met with in Central Asia, and an admirable series of photographic lantern slides served to illustrate his narrative. Major. and passing in review the principal writers of for themselves whether they want more of it. the day, we filled an idle moment by attempting | For ourselves, we cannot repress a regret to place in order a few who may be admitted as that a publishing house which has standing in the forefront. Selecting the novel- out a good number of well-written into only, let anyone of our readers endea- and excellent books should have anything like your the task for himself. He will find it much more difficult than appears to be the case at first sight. Personal predilection, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, will decide more often than serious analysis, at any rate in the case of living novellists. Barrie, Hardy and Kipling, however seem to us to stand by themselves -- somewhat apart from the William de Morgaus, Crocketts, Maurice Hewletts, May Sinclairs, Lucas Mulets, Bensons, on the English side of the Atlantic. and we have to go to the United States to the American Winston Churchill, Jack London, John Fox, jun., Owen Wister, Henry James, to find men to compare with our own three stelwarts. It may be futile to attempt classification, or even to determine place Kipling will hold eventually in literature of the period; but whatever our personal prejudices or preferences we cannot deny that Kipling is a Master, both in prose and verse, and that his influence has been enormous in spreading imperial sentiment throughout the British Empire. In everything he writer, and underlying everything he writes, there is a desire to animate his fellow-citizens with the patriotism which makes for national greatness. It is not always obvious. But it is there nevertheless. and some day it will be noknowledged by the British public and placed to Kipling's credit even by his detractors.

"Rewards and Fairies" is a sequel to "Puck of Pook's Hill." Throughout, it displays the touch of the Master. We have seen it stated that unlike most sequels it surpasses the original. For our own part, we cannot make any comparison, for, as it happens, "Puck of Pook's Hill" is one of the few products of, Kipling's pen which we have not read; but this we can say, that it is quite fit to rank with the best he has written. The story of the first steel knife in Britain, the tales of Drake's development nan bold and daring navigator and defender of English prestige, the death of King Harold, the conversion of St. Winifred-all are calculated to stimulate the youthful mind, and not the young only. We venture to think a youngster will remember more about Talleyrand and his chief characteristic after reading " A Priest in Spite of Himself " than he would after reading some people's histories. But there is no need to go into details. We must refer our readers to the book itself, recommending it without reservation. As a fin sh to this note on the work of the Master, we would recommend parents and teachers to place before the young under their care and training the poem entitled "If ___," from which we quote the closing Bayce & Co. A Snail's Wooing. By E. M. SNEYD-KYNNERSLEY. London : Macmillan & Co. Mr. Sneyd-Kynnersley, who was an Inspector of Schools, wrote a book of reminiscences chockful of good stories, and as he is a graceful writer, with a charm all his own, combining literary allusion with a considerable knowledge of the Swiss Alps, he might be expected to produce semething readable from cover to cover. It would be a mistake to claim for his present volume high rank as a novel. But the story is a straightforward one, clean and never tedious. It relates the wooing of a judge's daughter by a rich young berrister, and there are various excursions to Alpine peaks, where the ardour of love is superior to the perils and chills inseparable from hill-climbing. If we might venture upon a comparison, we would say that Mr. Sneyd-Kynnersley does for hill-climbing what the Williamsons have done for motoring. We have read few books recently with greater pleasure. Is it just the sort of novel a man or woman chained to Hongkong for a year or two would like to take up and read, especially if one had in view the enjoyment of a part of the "home" holiday in the invigorating air of Switzerland.

The Methods of Mr. Ames, By the AUTHOR of "John Johns." London: T. Werner

It is not quite easy to say what were the methods of Mr. Ames nor why he pursued them. Almost it seems as if the author wished to convey the impression that there are no pure wemen in England-that all have sinned, have fallen from high estate, have lost that quality which women are supposed to prize most highly and which men desire in women, purity. Ames is an Englishmen educated in Rome, and is a student of art in Florence when a relative dies in Australia and leaves him a huge fortune. Upon his arrival in England, he divides his attention between the pursuit of politics and of women. If English society is as the author endeavours to depict it, then it is rotten to the very core; but we cannot conceive of any society which would tolerate the method of Mr. Ames. He is not a gentleman, and does not behave as one. "Sax impulse"-a euphemism-plays a great part in this farrage of words, where grammar is violated and good taste is conspicuous by its absence. The reader is carried from chapter to chapter in breathless haste, and is lured on by the imminent indiscretion, which never happens, and when the end is reached he seems to have supped on saw" dust washed down with the stale drippings from Rewards and Fairies. By RUDYARD KIPLING. a common inn. People who have read "The Adventures of John Johns" and remember the Musing on modern liter ture a few days ago, theme that runs through its pages must decide "The Methods of Mr. Ames" on its list.

> A Natural Method of Physical Training. B. EDWIN CHECKLEY. London: T. Werner

Laurie. There are ten chapter and a large number of illustrations in Mr. Checkley's interesting book. The object of the author is to enable men and wemen to make muscle and to reduce flesh without dieting or apparatus. Those of us who find the daily use of apparatus irksome wil welcome the suggestions of Mr. Checkley. Here in simple and understandable English, he teaches us how to breathe, how to carry the body, the functions of muscles and joints and how to exercise them. There is a chapter on the treatment of obesity, another on training for women, one on the hygiene and training of children which ought community without recourse to medicines assistants. In a place like Hongkong, where there is a tendency for long spells at a time to avoid all forms of lealth-giving exertion, with the consequent result that we allow the body to get into an unhealthy condition, often with disastrous and permanent effects upon the system, the hints of Mr. Checkley, whereby those ev effects can be avoided without irksome or violent exercises, should be particularly wel come. In his preface, he writes:- "Physical training is 'in the air,' but the observer of current events is able to discover in reports from the athletic world that there is something wrong about most modern methods of training. Muscle-moulding schemes that make mon die in middle life may be pictorially interesting and may sound heroic, but they are not for that wise average mortal who wishes simply to feel light and strong, and, if need find himself ready to safely enter on any reasonable physical undertaking. The author of this book believes that there is more 'straining' in a good many popular systems and the method he himself advocates perhaps DENBY. To the title is added the words "and other 'exaggerations" and from this it may be inferred that the letters are not bond fide descriptions of life in Shanghai. Still they possess that substratum of truth which gives force to his sarcasm and picturesqueness to his narratives. Without doubt the sketches are clover. They are well written and bristle with maxims worthy of Mark Twain. The stories and sketches which follow the letters are also good. Some of the nautical tales are "after" W. W. In Forbidden Seas. By H. J. Snow, F. R. G. S. London : Edwin Arnold. This work, descriptive of life in the still little known regions of the Behring eas and the Kurile Islands, is a most praiseworthy effort. The author tells in a most fascinating manner the story of seal and otter hunting, illustrating the difficulties and dangers under which this occupation is carried on, and supplies information about both which is fresh, interesting and instructive. The reader in bound to marvel at the persistent courage shown by these hunters in the face of storm and shipwreck and sudden death, but a one proceeds with the narrative one realises something of the fascination which such a life holds for those engaged in it. The seal hunter is described by Mr Snow in those words: "In the whole course of my experience I have never known an instance of a sea otter hunter or a sealer stealing a skin, committing a robbery or attacking a native. On the other hand. scores of these men have been shot down, whilst ongaged in pelagic scaling, and murdered while hunting near the land without even a shot being fired in retaliation by those attacked." Since Jack London wrote "The Sea Wolf." probably no book of such interest has been written on this subject, and the book under to be read by all parents, and a lot of useful notice has the additional charm of being a purely hints and suggestions, which, if followed, would personal narration of daily events. The tend to improve the general health of the description of the habits of the sea ofters and seals is good, and all interested in the saving of and dectoring. Some of our readers are these from the great destruction now proceeding already aware of the good work that is will read with pleasure the chapter upon this being effected by Mr. Eugene Sandow and his subject. One closes the book, however with a feeling of regret that the brave men who formerly took their lives in their hands in these little known sens for the sake of adorning fair women are rapidly dying out and that huge organised trusts are getting this adventurous business into their own hands, doubtless to their own profit, but disastrous to the seals and the otters, to the men engaged in this occupation, and, above all, perhaps, to the great empire that used to breed such a gallant stock of sailors.

> Mistakes commonly made by Japanese and Chinese in writing and speaking English. By W. B. MASON. Hongkong: Kelly &

This is a second and enlarged edition of a useful little work. In the words of the preface it is a "collection of errors commonly made by Japanese, and, almost as largely, by Chinese students in speaking and writing English." Many are derived from efforts to translate literally idioms and ideas which have practised in and out of the college gymnasium, no equivalents in English. We commend this little book to the notice of Chinese students of

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

The great success of the German chemical industry has been brought about maintained by the employment of large iumbers of trained research chemists, and value of this scientific service in indicated by the figures Consul Genera Guenther has drawn from the annual reports o the employing factories. The works at Biebrich with $2,000,000 capital stock, earned $1,000,000 in 1909, paid 32 per cent. dividends, and gave $100,000 as gratuities to directors, A number of other concorns paid 12 to 27 percent, with gratuities to directors. The Farbenfabriken-Bayer Company, Elberfold, whose capital is $8,500,000, made a profit of over $5,000,000, declared a 24 mer cent, dividend, and added an extra dividend of 21 per cent. from an overgrown reserve that still amounted to $4,355,000 after the disburse- | bacilli. This cause seems to be responsible for mont. This establishment claims a perfected capital of $8,500,000, has erected works in but the extent of their influence is yet to be England since the new British patent law was determined. enacted, and has also built large works in Norway for extracting nitrogen from the air.

IS THE EARTH LOSING ITS WATER? The reported drying up of lakes in Switzerland, Germany, Russia and Tibet has led to the suggestion that the earth is becoming dessicatand a novel German theory is that the ultra-violet rays of sunlight are concerned in the process. These rays slowly decompose water into hydrogen dioxide and hydrogen the latter but no oxygen being evolved. The action taking place in the air, hydrogen dioxide is found in rain, while the hydrogen rises and at 62 miles constitutes 993 per cent of the atmosphere. This lightest of gases, moreover, is thought to be escaping into space.

A SHEEL WITH A TORCH.

The luminous night-shell that the British Admiralty has been testing has screwed to its base a cylinder of illuminant that bursts into flame as thegun is fired. The missile is brightly lighted through its whole trajectory, greatly aiding the gunners in estimating range, but presenting a strange and weird appearance.

REKING DESERT PRODUCTS.

Prickly pears and other cactl are the plants from which useful products must be obtained if the arid regions of the south western United States are to be given agricultural value. The experimentatation at Las Cruces, New Mexico, began planting prickly pears six or eights years ago, placing the pieces in farrows ten feet apart, and in four or five years the rows had spread to a width of six to eight feet, leaving only narrow paths between them. The plants received no cultivation, irrigation or other attention. Much work has been expended in the effort to obtain serviceable materials from these desert plants, and the results seem to give good promise of practical success. The dark red fruit, the size of a small egg, yields an excellent fruit colouring for confectionery and jellies. Half a dozen kinds of augur have been extracted and these have been fermented and transformed into alcohol. Calculations show that plants four years old should supply $150 of denatured alcohol per acro The fruit is borne yearly, no replanting or other work of cultivation is necessary, and the cost of the products is very little besides manufacture and transportation to a market,

PHOTOGRAPHIC MEASUREMENT OF THE

Photography of the arrora borealis having been at last made practicable, we may hope soon to know more of this mysterious earth light. For the pictures recently obtained at Bosekop, Norway, Carl Stormer used a cinematographic lens of one inch diameter and two inches focal leng h, and with Lumiere plates succeeded in gotting 800 photographs - about one half of them good-with exposures ranging from a fraction of a second to 20 seconds. The distance and position of the aurora were very accurately determined by comparing its place among the stars on photographs taken simultaneously at two telephone-connected stattions about three miles apart.

BITTER STAGE LIGHTING.

Diffused light for the stage, in place of the usual glare of electric ares, is obtained by a Spanish engineer by reflecting the rays of an are lamp from silk bands unrolled in any desired position by pulleys. A quarter sphere lined with dead white is used as n sky, and the illusion of unlimited space is given by the diffused light thrown upon this arch

METALS POWDERED BY LIGHT.

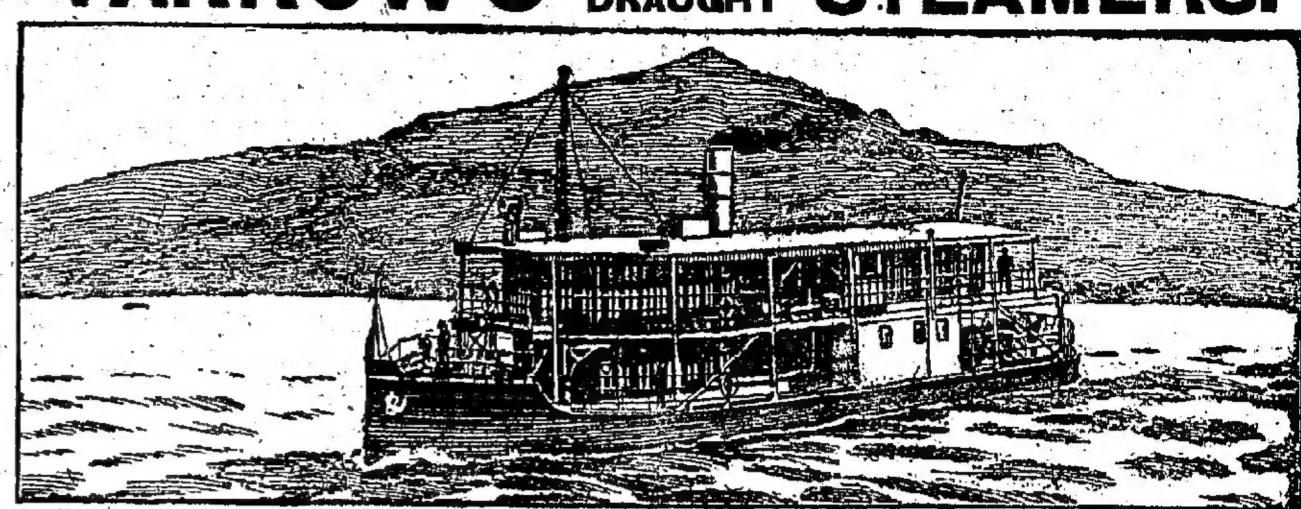

Colloidal solutions, in which suspended particles give jelly-like characteristics, are now produced in a very curious way by Svedberg, a Swedish experimenter, who makes use of Lenard and Wolfs discovery of a score of years ago that ultraviolet rays may under certain conditions, strike off dust by their impact on solid metals. After thorough cleaning, Svedberg phoes the metal in water or other solvent, exposed in a flat dish to rays from quartz-glass morcury-vapour lamp very near at hand Silver, copper, tin and lead are rapidly attacked or pulverized, the size and number of the particles broken off varying in different liquids, and after a few minutes the ultra-microscope shows the usual peculiarities of a colloidal solution. On platinum, aluminum and cadmium there is little or no effect. In some solutions the particles are uniformly exceedingly small in size, and their incessant lively dancing or "Brownian movement" gives them a striking appearance in the instrument. Further experiments are expected to bring out interesting and inportant new facts.

CHEMICALLY COLOURED FLOWERS.

Remarkable effects on the colours of plants are now produced by chemicals fed to the soil, but the imported peculiarities are transient and cannot be transmitted to succeeding generations. In late trials by a German chemist, petals of a white rose have been given a red colour by application to the soil of a mixture of potassium hydrate, calcium hydrate and lead acctate. Other experiments were made with the red-flowering hydringes, and a quantity of petassium and aluminum sulphate, or of aluminum sulphate and calcium hydrate. when fed to the soil, transformed the flowers to a beautiful blue. Red or pink colour was in . tensified by lead acctate.

L RUTHERFOORD SKEY (Author of "Passing Down the Avenues," etc.).

Troubleus days had fallen upon old Balleen Castle. The young ladies, last representatives of the ancient house of McLoughlin, had been sinking deeper and deeper into the pit propared for thom. The first shovelful of rich virgin soil, out of which the pit was hollowed, had been heaved aside, light-heartedly, by Major McLoughlin the day he approached his new tenant, and neighbour, Mr. Joseph Frost, for a temporary loan of one hundred pounds. The loan was to be repaid in three months. The Major's promise was made all in good faith, but it suited Mr. Frost's book better to oncourage the gallant officer to stave of the evil day of repayment. The Great Leveller, meantime, stepped in unawares and laid the Major low on the cold bosom of Mother Earth; by which time Mr. Joseph Frost, gombeen man in disguise, had managed to mount up an insignificant debt one hundred pounds multiplied by ton. Nor was this all: the gombeen man, afflicted by a plethera of wealth and flesh, was afflicted likewise by the

Had it come to this? " Take him back, Gusty," she said, turning away. "You must take him to the fair to morrow-to be sold."

And she walked scross the courtyard with her head held resolutely up. But her eyes were filled with unshed tears. The sins of the fathers were to be visited upon the children!

"Poor Father," she said, sternming back the tide lahind her eyelashes, "you little dreamt it bred spring in his slonder legs. Then one would come to this!"

Back to his loose-box Gusty led the Shah. As he turned to fasten the door he spat again on the paved floor, and scratched his head anew for inspiration. Presently a smile added to the width of his broad face.

Into the stable Biddy stole like a thief in the "What's that Miss Ellice was sayin', Gusty a queen, but exacted homage as a king. His all?" avick?" she whispered.

Gusty swung a small boy on to the Shah's bare back, put the reins in his hands and turned the horse's head in the direction indicated. The lad, who had been hangering for the chance, tucked his bare heels into the sleek and gathered up the reins like a muster of horse. The Shah stepped out daintily with a wellby one he skimmed over each obstacle in his way without effect or questi n. His action was irreproachable, his jumping dean and stylish. The group of men around Gusty grew in numbers. Small, scattered knots of talking, idle men concentrated about the middle of the green, attracted like so many needles to the magnet's point. The Shah held court like all the account I can get of him! What'll I do at like was seldern seen on a hunting-field and never on a borse fur. As the bare-footed,

"What's the bidding?" asked a voice which strangely resembled Jor's proceeding from the neighbourhood of his boots,

"Three hundred and fifty guineas is the last heard, and, sure, that's no price at all for such a fine baste," answered Gusty promptly. Boy, take the horse across them little lopps beyond. Any more offers, gentlemen?"

Silence reigned while the Shah regotiated the hurdle, bank and stone wall and back again, stone-wall, bank and hurdle, in suporb style. The feather-weight Micky sat perched upon his back like a bird on a swaying

"Faith, 'tis child's play to him," remarked the industrious Gusty. "Todious work, selling a horse. Look here, sir," his voice sank into a melodious whispor as he turned to Frost. "I'll m ke a clane and honest deal with you. Add fifty guiness apiece for them three lepps he took-there's no telling what the baste'll be worth in another five year. Say the word, sir " Will ye take four hundred-even money?"

"Fair, Captain Nolan, I wouldn't say no, barring I got me orders to do the best I could, whatever it might be. And, by rason of that, may be there's a gentleman here-" As a red rag to an infuriated bull so was the very name of the detested Captain Nolan to Mr. Joseph Frost. In Captain Nolin he saw a rival, a dangerous man in his path to the alter. The mere mention of that name now drove the unsuspecting Frost straight into the net.

He would have onten his head off rather than be cutdone by a half-pay, aristocratic snob. "I accept your offer. - I'll give five hundred guineas!" he cried, growing purple lest the other should outbid him yet.

"Done!" cried Gusty, "and on his hand. "Shake hands, sir! I'm proud to deal with a rale gentleman . . . . The little horse is sold. gents, and we may as well be moving on." As they steed on the steps of the bank, where the crisp notes had been exchanged and deposited by the careful Gusty, a boy was seen leading a horse to and fro. At a first glance he might have been taken for the Shah. Mr. Frost. unusually affable in his purse-full conceit, saw and remarked upon him. "Nice little horse."

"The Shah's own brother, sir; grand weight-

"H'm ... Selling him to-day ?", "Well now, sir -not rightly, so to speak. Balleen's a small place, sir, and blood stock has, in a manner of spakin, to take it time about. Here, Mike, bring over that horse. Maybe you'll be wanting a weight-carrier one day, sir, and if so be -he's a beauty and no mistake-Peter's Wife's Mother's grandson-to obligo your honour I'd be tempted to give him away at three-lifty." Gusty waxed eloquent, so eloquent that ten minutes la er they disappeared into the bank again and notes to the tune of three hundred pounds were lodged in Miss McLonghin's name.

Then Gusty stood at the counter, scratching his head sheepishly.

"Well, I must be going," he said in a hoarse undertone, "to get that big horse of Captain Nolan's which he's going, as you might say, hat and all, to make a little keepsake of to the soung mistress. When I told him I'd sold the Shah to your honour he gave a screech out of him all as though I'd held the Bank of Ireland over. his head! Well, nothing would do him at all but must take his own hunter-the one that took the big lepp over the ten fat wall be Sullivan's hay-barn-to Herself-and ours I needn't say why, either. And, mind you-the grand gentleman that he is, to be sure! -he made me take me oath on the Book I'd let ne'er a word out of me what stable the horse came from, for fear, ye understand, for fear the young lady'd send him home, post-haste, and he couldn't, he said, in rason bear to see Horself breaking her heart for the horse she rared. Frix Captain Nolan may keep his ould nag himself-your honour's got the rale generous spirit and no mistake! Good-lay, sir, and may heaven be your bed!"

Gusty whipped out of the bank as nimbly as a goat detected in mischief. But he wandered round and round the town asking as he went if anyone had sight or tidings of Captain Nolan. His search and enquiries were fruitless.

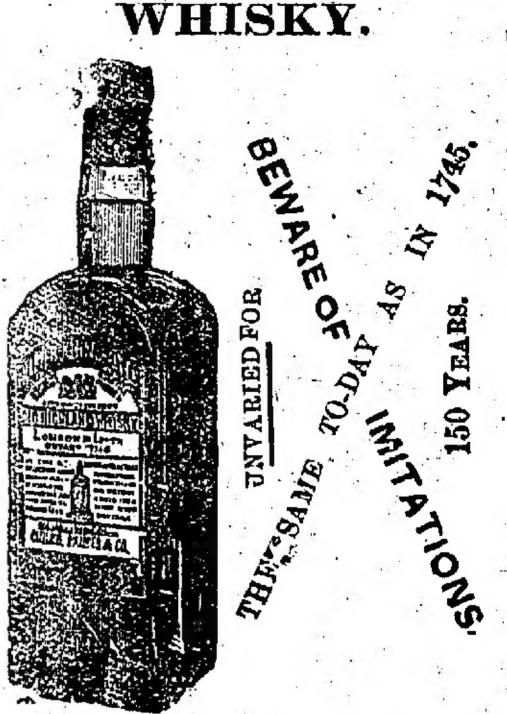

"Bodad," muttered Gusty, "divil a bit of him rapidly. ever s tfoot on the fair-green this day ! That's

"Talk of the divil -" muttered Gusty fervently, pulling the hat off his tousled head; and he launched head foremost into a lamentable recital of his woos.

Captain Nolan, a bronzed giant who had, as required, faced the splutter of the enemy's guns, himself still and silent as ahungry spider by a new span web, hid the smile he could not restrain, beneath his moustache.

"Och, Captain, if your honour'd only ambusbcade the fortriss - moaning Herself without disrepect -wouldn't the Ould Boy's luckattend

" Maybe it would, Gusty."

Stooping quickly he had a caregsing hand upon the Shah's curving neck. "God forgive mel but I was on my way to thrash you within an inch of your life for selling her horse without consulting me, man! Get home, get along home with your wedding gift as fast as your logs will carry you and say what you please." Captain Nolan wheeled his horse about and rode of "God bless your honour-long life to you, sir! And may the sun never stop shining on Herself-" but he was out of earshot. Watching two red-crestal newts in mimic battle in the little lake at the lower and of the Castle lawn, Captain Nolan discovered Ellice McLoughlin. Her dark, beautiful eyes were swollen with recent grief, for the wrench of parting from her favourite was a sore one, and what was it but the beginning of the end? While yet her father lived she thought, she

"Acushla machree," he said softly, " won't you give me your sorrows and take you my heart? I've waited-wanted to speak-to call you by the sweetest name on God's earth, acushla.

Gusty saw them together by the lake and stole by unseen. No one heard the tale he told that night, but it brought a glad shining mist to Ellie McLoughlin's eyes, and, for the rest, Gusty sang himself to sleep, to score still more serenely till break of day.

WON THE CHAMPIONSHIP CUP.

HOW A WEAR YOUNG MAN BECAME AN ALL-BOUND ATHLETE, THANKS TO DE. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

of Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

MR. P. G. DE SILVA OF COLOMBO (FROM A PHOTOGRAPH).

"From my infancy I was always of very slight build and lacking in energy," said Mr. de Silva, "and very often during my younger days had to stay away from school through one ailment or another. About four years ago I became a sufferer from Dysentery and this still skirt and its extreme ugliness, its senselessfurther sapped my store of vitality. Following | ness and unbecomingness to the female form on that silment I fell into a very weak state of divine. It is rather comforting to know that health, and all the medicines I tried in the hope in Paris, the capital of the chiffens, its run of recovering strength failed to build me up.

Pale People, and in this way was prompted to waist, which remains rather short. This Pills my health and spirits improved consider- curve of the back. When shall we see it ably, and as I continued taking them I grow in again? It must be borne in mind by our health and energy every day until I felt myself readers that no trace whatever is left of the perfectly strong and well Soon after that I hobble skirt in the best and newest Paris gowns. won the championship cup at the sports of An example may be quoted. It is a tailor-made merit; the athlete who wins it must, naturally, the cloth in a geometric design. At the back have much stamina, and be exceptionally "fit" the skirt is fairly full. The coat is caught in credit for having enabled me to carry off this other at the back. These serve to confine the friend to me. All the difference between miserable weakness and joyous redundant strength - that is what a short course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People has meant to many thousands of nerveless, feeble, always ailing mon and women. It is by building up the blood and recharging held in by a draped velvet belt, and closed the entire system with abundant nervous energy that these Pills restore health and dispel disease. Among the maladies for which they are the proved remedy are Angemia, Debility, Early Decay, Indigestion, Disordered Liver, Headaches, Backpains, Rhoumatism, Sciatica, Paralysis, (even in its severest forms). Eczema, skirt diagonally, and is held by a row of Mr. a. d. Mrs. A. Von Scrofula, and Skin Eruptions, Malaria, and the buttons covered with silk. THE SMART COIFFURES.

Never perhaps in the history of the world The championship cup of the Wesley College, Colombe, was won in 1907 by Mr. P. G. de Silva, a young man who from his infancy had never been robust, and who some four years ago was still further enfeebled by an attack of Dysentery. Mr. de Silva, who is new a teacher at the Wesley College and also a lieutenant is the Wesley College and also a lieutenant is unhes itatingly attributes his ability to win this Cup for all round excellence in athletic sports to the strength giving, health restoring powers. has a greater quantity of false hair been worn than now. Even in the chignen days when the to the strength giving, health restoring powers elaboration of the conflure is contradicted sometimes by the folds of straight, limp hair with which the chignon is covered. But however arranged, the whole idea is favourable to the manufacturers of false hair. One of the quaintest coiffures is that which has an erection standing upwards and outwards from the crown of the head exactly the shape of a Coburg loaf.

FOR EVENING WEAR. The hair ornament is not quite so flashy nor so yuigar as it was last season. bandage has completely disappeared from smart assemblies, and the head on which it is seen proclaims itself as beyond the pale of polite society. On the other hand, the bandeau of pearls, beads, or sequins is even more elaborate than that of last year. It is mercifully narrower, but sometimes widens at the back in order to support, like an inverted flying buttress, the chignon above described.

A very poetic hair ernament is inskeleten leaves imitated in dull silver tinsel, the colour resembling exactly that of the skilfully manipulated dead leaf. This laid along the hair above the brows suits a charming, spiritual face extremely well. One of the prettiest possible bandeaux is a band of black relvet with undulating edges bordered with tiny pearls. In fair hair this often looks quite levely. Its simplicity gives it an added grace.

Reams have been written about the hobble is completely over. The newest gowns "After remaining about six months in this emanating from the French conturiors are wretchedly weak condition, I chanced to read in certainly tight, but not so much so as they the newspapers of several remarkable cures were in the spring. On the contrary, the accomplished by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for' folds fall naturally and 'gracefully from the try if these Pills would benefit me. After the latter characteristic deprives the figure of use of two bottles of Dr. Williams' Pink one of its most beautiful lines; the inward Wesley Coflege, which cup is presented annually in myrtle green clo h with tablier pointed at to the competitor who displays the best all round the sides and embreidered in the same colour as both in wind and limb. I certainly give the at the waist by two tabs placed close above each much coveted prize to Dr. Williams Pink Pilis. Truly this medicine has been a good which end midway bet ween elbow and wrist.

A FEW TAILOR-MADES. Light blue is the colour of a cloth tai or-made which is practically a double skirt, both untrimmed, but the upper one raised in the middle of the front and draped under three velvet buttons. The jacket in this instance is below it with six velvet buttons. It opens at the back to show a lace guimpe. This costume is walking length. So is a bananacoloured cloth with a deep collar in brown panne and revers on the short sleeves to match. A wide hand of panne crosses the jacket is quite military, fastening across from the left shoulder to the waist with rows of braid and buttons. A rather remarkable costume "pour le tooling" is in tartan with a blue and green ground striped with a line of vellow silk. A hand of plain cloth in green finishes the skirts round the foot, and clears the ground all round. The cross-over bodice and the sleeves are in green satin of the same colour as this band. The narrow balt defines the short waist and is in green cord with long tasselled ends. The guimpe in white lace shows between the crossing fronts. The hat is in black velvet draped with a shot blue and groon wide ribbon; THE GOWN PROPER.

The best French authorities tell us that the gown made all in one has disappeared. That in two or three different parts has now begun to reign. First the skirt, then the tunic, and then the bodice. The under-skirt is frequently in the new ratine, the soft and fluffy material which resumbles in some degree that so much used for children's coats for the park. Over this under-skirt falls the tunic, very often in thin and summer-like fabries, but sometimes in cloth a tone lighter than that of the ratine. The bodice is a sort of blouse arranged above a guimpe of widemeshed tulle in a pl, in colour. This is what a French tailor cals a simple gown. We may criticise it as "scrappy," and scrappiness has always been regarded as a sartorial fault. How much more dignified is a dress in a single material, the harmonious folds falling uninterruptedly to the foot of the wearer. Such an one is to be seen at an English dressmaker's in flue grey cloth, the bodice opening over an aluminum gauze vest, lined with old rose silk, the sleeves finished at the wrist with a band of the aluminum and old rose. This is worn under a long cont of mole fur, arranged in squares after the fashion of the moment. The hat is grey velvet, with a drapery of very wide grey satin ribbon, with a tiny edge of old rose,

THE SMALL ETCETERAB. The new buttons are extremely elaborate, and though only three appear upon the long coat, those three must be either embroidered braided, or in some un common design in metal possibly oxdised silver. Another of the necessary etceteras is the guimpe, which should be either in embroidered timel, gold or silver, possibly silver over gold-or in some of the exquisite em broideries in which soft colours are mingled artistically. Sometimes this embroidery simulates a vest, and is used as an edge for the collar and cuffs when these are in black or #### dark-toned velvet or satin. DINNER AND EVENING PROCES.

Of evening gowns it can only be said that embroderies, and the frequent addition of fur to the scheme render them as fascinating as it is pessible to be so long as the very short waist and clinging style continue. A hanging over each arm with a deeper point reaching below the short waist at the back-The ends in front are tasselled with the white porcelain beads. A very levely tunic in black net, embroidered rather heavily with these dead white beads, is worm over black satin. The skirt finishes with a wide band of the

A BRITISH EMPIRE SONG.

Britannia! first and foremost, Dowered with Ocean's crown, From Northern Pole to Southern, From sunrise to sundown : O'er Islands and Dominions Thy Flag of Union flies; Britannia! bid thy children

At Duty's call arise,

For Peace, and British Freedom In guard of British arms, For British Law and Justice, For the British Home's dear charms To defend, without defiance, This British beritage,

Let one United Empire In loyal league engage. With the Islands of the Homeland With Canada's Domain, With an Africa united,

With Realms of the Southern main. With Eastern Nations, trusted To British faith and might, Britannia! build thine Empire, With God, on truth and right.

H. WACE Canterbury, Oct., 1910. (in The Times).

As your teeth are wanted to last -for years to comebegin now to use

However perfect your teeth may naturally be, they still require, and will well repay, the slight trouble and the thort time you should daily give to their care.

The regular use of Calvert's Carbolic Tooth Powder ensures a complete antiseptic cleaning, helps the toothbrush to do its work easily, pleasantly, and thoroughly, and thus assists your own efforts towards keeping the teeth in the best possible condition.

THE

REMINGTON TYPEWRITER

(WHICH WAS THE ORIGINAL TYPEWRITING MACHINE)

has always been, and it is to-day the

RECOGNIZED LEADER AMONG TYPEWRITERS" The annual sales of the Remington Typewriter greatly exceed those of any other writing machine.

The number of Remingtons use throughout the World to-day is greater than that of any writing machine, or of many others combined.

BECAUSE

- IT IS UNPARALLELED IN QUALITY.

The very name "Remington" stands for strength and reliability in a Typewriter. At the Brussels International Exposition the Remington Typewriter

Co., in accordance with their well-known practice for several years past, did not enter into any competition for Prizes or Awards for their machines.

Having been awarded innumerable distinctions at all important exhibitions for many years, the Company decided some years ago that this kind of advertisement was no longer of any advantage to them, and therefore discontinued to enter into competition at exhibitions.

CAUTION.

Beware of skilfully renovated old Remingtons, sometimes put up in original packing, which are on the market just now and sold undervarious descriptions, such as "Re-constructed," etc. They are offered at very low prices, and though APPARENTLY new are in reality quite worn out and valueless.

For Prospectus, Prices, etc., apply to :-

REMINCTON TYPEWRITER Co. (Incorporated).

SIEMSSEN & CO.,

N.B .- A skilful operator will be sent to your Office to explain the mechanism of the latest models if desired.
